BEFORE YOU LEAVE

The halls will echo a little less,
Without your laughter and your mess.
In silent rooms and empty space,
We'll miss your voice, your familiar face.

You were our seniors, our quiet guide,
In every fall, you stood with pride.
Now as you leave to chase what's new,
A part of this home goes with you.
We'll stay behind, but not the same—
Still carrying your light, your name.
